Survey Results-Analysis After reviewing the responses from your surveys, answer the following four questions:

How do your survey results from students compare with your survey results from adults?	What survey results, if any, indicate a need for peer mediation?
your survey results from adults?	mediation?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?
What pleases you about the survey results?	What concerns you about the survey results?